SEARCH

In 1977 the Southeast Asia Collection was named in honor of John M. Echols, professor of linguistics and literature in the Southeast Asia Program, who devoted three decades to its development. The Echols Collection has been a joint undertaking of the university, the library, and the Southeast Asia Program with the goal of acquiring a copy of every publication of research value produced in the countries of Southeast Asia and publications about the region published in other parts of the world...

SEARCH

The South Asia Collection in Kroch Library supports research and teaching in various disciplines at Cornell. Here South Asia comprises India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bhutan, Bangladesh, and Sri Lanka. The Library collection is particularly strong in areas where Cornell’s South Asia Program, a National Resource Center, has distinguished itself. As a “center for the peripheries,” it collects actively in the modern languages taught here, Hindi, Urdu, Bengali, Nepali, Sinhala, and Tamil, as well as the classical languages Sanskrit, Pali, and the Prakrits.
